

I'm deeply concerned about this. The Bill of Rights guarantees a free press and that free press has become one of the unofficial but incredibly important checks in our checks and balance system. If our major sources of news become any more alike, as they surely will with this move, we endanger the ability of networks to check and balance each other - which is equally important as checking and balancing the power structures of our government.

Please don't let this happen.

Thanks,
Jim Rosengarten
